PRESS RELEASE

Quest Food Exchange and YVR: New Partners in Food Security

Vancouver, BC (February 22, 2011) Quest Food Exchange is pleased to announce the Vancouver Airport Authority as its newest partner in increasing and improving access to food.

Over the next two years, a donation of $100,000 has been promised to Quest by the Airport Authority. This generous donation enables Quest to purchase an additional refrigerated transport truck as well as facilitating the delivery of donations by keeping all of Quest's trucks running efficiently.

The Airport Authority has also committed to raising Quest's profile to the many businesses that operate at the Vancouver International Airport (YVR). The Hudson Group, HMS Host, Paradies Shops, and the Fairmont Hotel already make significant contributions of food and other goods to Quest. As well, the thousands of employees and passing travelers moving through YVR daily amount to the population of a small city; this is plenty of exposure for the good deeds of both Quest and the Airport Authority.

Anne Murray, Vice President of Community and Environmental Affairs for the Airport Authority, said "this partnership makes a lot of sense for us in that we are able to help feed the larger community we serve, while supporting our environmental initiatives by encouraging our retail partners to divert food to Quest that would otherwise go to the landfill."

Peter Brasso, President of the Board of Directors at Quest, confirms "the Airport Authority's sponsorship will not only augment the collection and delivery of food to allow us to better serve our clients, but will also help facilitate key relationships with YVR employees, partners, tenants and travelers that will only enhance and broaden our reputation in Metro Vancouver and internationally."
